THE PRESS.

Life of a Locomotive Engineer. To whom to credit the following we know not. It seems a person had quit the business of engineering locomotives:

Upon making bold to ask him his reasons, he gave me the following story, and since then I have found it out to be striotly true:

"Five years since I was running upon the N. Y. C. R. R. My run was from B— to R—. It was the Lightning Express train, and it was what its name denotes, for it was fast—a very fast run, and if I do say it, the old Tornado could go. I have seen her throw her six-foot drivers so as to be almost invisible to the eye. And let me here remark, it is supthe eye. And let me here remark, it is sup-posed by many that railroad engineers are a heard-hearted set of mon; their lives are hard, 'tis true, but I do claim to have as fine a feeling, and a heart that can sympathize with the unfortunate as any man that breathes. But to my story:

"About half a mile from the village of Bthere is a nice little cottage but few feet from the track. At that time a young married couple lived there. They had one child, a little bey about four years old, a bright, black-eyed, curly-headed little chap as you ever saw. I had taken a great deal of interest in the little fellow and had thrown eandy and oranges to him from the train, and I was sure to see him peoping through the fence when my train

"One fine sunny afternoon we were behind time and running fast, nordid we stop at B----, and I was making up one hour before reaching R.—. We came up at a tremendous speed, and when sweeping around a curve, my eye following the track, not over two hundred feet shead sat the little fellow playing with a kitten which he held in his lap. At the sound of our approach he looked up and laughed, elapping he little hand in high che at the afficience. his little hands in high glee at the affrighted kitten as it ran from the track. Quicker than kitten as it ran from the track. Quicker than lightning that blasts the tall pine from the mountain top, I whistled "down breaks," and reversed my engine, but I knew it was impossible to stop. Nobly did that old engine try to save him. The awful straining and writhing of its iron drivers told but too plainly of the terrific velocity we had attained. I was out of the cabin window and down on the cow-catcher in a flash. The little fellow stood still. I motioned him off and shouted; his little blue eves opened wide with astonishment, and a eyes opened wide with astonishment, and a merry laugh was upon his lips. I held my breath as we rushed up to him, and made a desperate attempt to save him, but missed, and as his little body passed, I heard a feeble cry "Mother!" and the forward truck crushed him to atoms. Oh, God! that moment! I may live sir, to be an old man, but the agony of that moment can never be erased from my memory. The cars stopped some rods from the spot, and I ran back as soon as possible. His mother saw the train stop, and a fearful foreboding flashed upon her at once. She came rushing frantically to the spot where we stood. Nover shall I forget the look she gave me as she beheld her first-born a shapeless mass. I would have given my whole existence to have avoided that moment! I have seen death in all its forms upon railroads. I have seen men, women and children mangled and killed—I have seen all this, but that innocent boy, as he looked up in my face, and was killed almost in my arms—it unnerved me, and from that day I made a solemn vow never to run a locomotive any more.

That young mother is now in the Utica Lunatic Asylum. From the hour her boy was killed reason had left its throne."

He stopped and wiped the tears from his eyes, and said, "You may think it weak in me to shed tears, but I can not help it." "No," I replied, "but think it noble; and sir, would God every man had a heart as large as I have often thought since, how few are those who give one passing thought to the man of strong nerve and stout arm, who guides them through darkness and storms with the speed of the wind safely to their journey's end. They do not for a moment turn their attention to the iron monster that is dragging them forward with fearful velocity to meet friends and relations or home and all its loved ones. They do not realize that the man who guides the lery monster holds all their recious lives at his command, and that the least negligence upon his part would cause sorrow and mourning in a thousand homes that are now waiting the return of the absent loved.

An American Equestrienne in Paris The New York Tribune of Tuesday informs us that Miss T., known on the turf at Paris as the fair Amazon of Washington, was so brilliant at the races on her horse, jet black, save a white star on the ferehead, that her appear ance was hailed everywhere with admiration and applause. A more lovely person can not be imagined; she guides playfully the most redoutable courser. "Belzebub," the name of Miss T.'s horse, is so untameable and ferecions that no rider can mount him, no groom guide or stall him. He has already killed an Englishman, named Thomas Dixon, who un-dertook to groom him in the stable. Rarey was powerless to tame this terrible anima Three persons only can approach "Belzebub, the first is Miss T. herself. The two other persons are young ladies of aixteen or eighteen years, Jenny and Kitty Wilkinson. But Belzebub only suffers them, and shows them no attachment. Jenny and Kitty act as grooms to Belzebub; they and curry him, and walk him in the morning. Jenny, the youngest of the sisters, a slight-looking child, whose womanly figure is not yet developed, is dressed as a groom, and follows Miss T. every time Miss T. pays visits on horseback, for no other person can hold Belze-bub by the bridle while his mistress dismounts. For the rest, Miss T. is a charming young person; and has no need to ride Belzebub to be admired. She is a handsome girl of the happy age, of fresh, brilliant and healthful looks. Her figure is beautiful; without being slight; she has dark, luxuriant hair, large flashing black eyes, beautiful arms, pure complexion, clear and fair; her chest well rounded, her hands small and delicate as that of a princess painted by Velasquez, her foot is nest and very firm, her voice clear and sonorous. She breathes all to this that her soul is worthy of this outside a soul noble and devoted—a heart passionate with generous ideas. She has much eleverness and great courage.

This young lady, this American, who brings to her husband a dower of six hundred thouand francs, will soon marry one of the most intelligent of the Franch generals. She will follow her husband to Italy. She will make what may be facetiously termed her nuptial campaign. Beliebab will go along. The oldiers admire this fine woman, and the fine horse.

QUICK WORK .- A few weeks since, we mentioned the murder of a mail-carrier in Upper Canada and the robbery of the mail. But a few hours elapsed before the murderers were apprehended, and in a day or two afterward, Moore and Over, two colored men were tried for the murder, found guilty, and ordered to be executed early in June. John A. Armstrong, another colored man who made con-fession, plead guilty, and has been sentenced to be hung on the seventh of June. Emeline Sinclair who testified that the prisoners were at her house all the night of the murder, was tried on Monday for perjury, found guilty and sentenced to ten year's imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Hutchison, Provost of Dublin, quarreled with Tisdale, the Irish Attorney General, and after having abused him in the grossest terms, sent him a challenge. Tisdale refused to fight him, urging that he himself was seventy-three, but laying very little stress on that. His principal objection was that they were not on an equality with reference to the pleasure to be derived from the contest, "If I should kill Hutchison," he said, "I should get nothing but the pleasure of killing him; whereas, if he kills me, he will get my place of Secretary of State, of which he has the reversion."

A San Francisco journal, received by the last overland mail, contains a statement to the effect that Thomas Janes, of Buffalo, and the manager of Wells, Fargo, & Co's. bouse, made a bet of $5000 with Commodore Vanderbilt, against the latter's magnificent $10,000 span of houses, that the overland mail, with dates of the 21st of March, would arrive in San Francisco before the passengers by the Nicarayua line of steamers landed in the city. By the arrival of the overland mail yesterday, Mr. Janes won the span of horses. The bet was made in the Union Club, New York. Mr. Janes is interested in the Butterworth stage line.

PROTESTANT CRMETREY AT ROME.—A correspondent writing from Rome says: I paid an early visit to the Protestant Cemetery, just without the walls. It is a neat, seeladed spot, and kept in very good order. Among the monuments I found one to the memory of a child of James Russel Lowell, the poet; another beautiful one for the young daughter of Mr. Philip Burrows, of New York, who died in 1858; and one for J. L. Martin, our late Charge d'Affaires to Rome, who died in 1848.

THE EXTENT OF LONDON.—London is rapidly extending its boundaries. It covers an area of one hundred and twenty-one equare miles, equal to a square of eleven miles to the side. The population in this area amounted in the year 1801 to 958,893, and in the year 1850 to 2,362,386. The London of 1858 is equal to three Londons of 1801. It has now a larger population than the six New England States annual payments to suit purchasers, not exceeding four years. Term more fully made known on the day of sale,

North Chillicothe is situated at the intersection of the Ohio Canal, with the Marietta and Cincinnati Raitroad, where a Freight Station is about being established, less than a quarter of a mile from the Oity of Chillicothe, which contained in 1851 about 5.300 inhabitants: since the completion of the Railroad the population has doubled.

The site is in the rich and beautiful Valley of the Scioto, where the menas of living are cheap and abundant. The facilities at this point for trade and manufactures are such as are rarely found united. It is connected by Navigation and Railroad with all the great centers of trade, from New York to New Orleans, including Cincinant, St. Louis, and all the West and South-west. The great Coal region of Ohio, traversed by both the Railroad and Canal, is less than thirty miles distant, and furnishes in great abundance several kinds of excellent Coal, at low prices.

For the last eighteen months the commerce and industry of the country have been paralyzed, and many persons thrown out of Employment. We call the attention of these and all others who wish to establish themselves in a home, with a steady and profitable employment, to the great advantage of our village, and of a Commercial and Murual Ald Association. Our plan is one of entire freedom and independence of each member, in his particular trade or employment; with aid from the Association to procure his materials, and sell his surplus products in the best markets. Several familes have already commenced on this plan.

A clear title will be given for the property sold, and it is at the option of the purchaser to join the Company or not as he may desm best. Suitable buildings, if erected soon, can be rented for at least 12 per cent, on their cost. Attendance will be given and terms fully stated on the day of sale, by
